(2) In the mechanical process, wood is ground into small chips. During the grinding, it is sprayed with water to keep it from burning from the friction of the grinder. Then the chips are soaked in water.

(3) In the chemical process, first the wood is washed, and then it is cut into small pieces in a chipping machine. Then the chips are cooked in certain chemicals. After the wood is cooked, it is washed to get rid of the chemicals.

(4) The next steps in making paper are the same for both the mechanical and the chemical processes. The pulp is drained to form a thick mass, is bleached with chlorine, and then is thoroughly washed again. Next the pulp is put through a large machine that squeezes the water out and forms the pulp into long sheets. After the pulp sheets go through a drier and a press, they are wound onto rolls. These rolls of paper are then ready for use.

(5) The next time you use paper, you should think about its origin and how it is made. And you should . . .

The First Telephone

Alexander Graham Bell, a teacher of the deaf in Boston, invented the first telephone. One day in 1875, while running a test on his latest attempt to create a machine that could carry voices, he accidentally spilled acid on his coat. Naturally, he called for his assistant, Thomas A. Watson, who was in another room. Bell said, "Mr. Watson, come here. I want you." Upon hearing words coming from the machine, Watson immediately realized that their experiments had at last been successful. He rushed excitedly into the other room to tell Bell that he had heard his words over the machine.

After successfully testing the new machine again and again, Bell confidently announced his invention to the world. For the most part, scientists appreciated his accomplishment, but the general public did not understand the revolutionary nature of Bell's invention. Believing the telephone was a toy with little practical application, most people paid little attention to Bell's announcement.
